

Love should not mean living in despair.

Child and Youth Care work means accepting another's reality. This can appear to be in conflict with one's personal values and world view. Understanding and knowing yourself and others will guide you in helping the young people in your care toward similar self understanding and acceptance.

