

Discharge does not have to be an ending.

Child and Youth Care workers often stay in touch with young people who have been in their care following discharge. This is often a natural outcome of relationship. Too often, discharge is abrupt, painful and final for youth in care. Initiatives to extend placements into early adulthood for those needing such supports, independent living programs and generating alumni components to programming are to be encouraged.

